SECOND ANNUAL FACULTY WORKSHOP PLANNED

DAYTON, Ohio, February 11, 1974 --- Measurement of human effectiveness, guidelines for non traditional study, sources of funds for teaching improvement, research and proposal writing will be some of the topics discussed during the University of Dayton's Second Annual Faculty In-Service Workshop, February 14 and 15.

Communication feedback is being built into the faculty workshop. Departments will be asked to respond to administration perspectives on the first morning of the workshop, Thursday. The day will open with an address by Fr. William Ferree, S.M., a member of the UD Board of Trustees, on "Purposes and Mission of the University." He will be followed by Fr. Raymond A. Roesch, S.M., UD President, who will speak on "Administrative Planning and Perspectives."

Following a mid-morning break, a panel of four faculty members plus a member of the Board of Trustees will offer views on quality performance. The last hour of the event will be reserved for reaction to the panel, Fr. Ferree, Fr. Roesch and his staff.

Feedback started several weeks ago when Fr. Roesch began a series of breakfasts for faculty, staff, and students. Response was oral and written as department members talked about their area's strengths and made suggestions for improvement and later returned questionnaires to the President's office.

At the same time, the workshop planning committee has been gaining its own perspective from answers to a questionnaire sent to faculty members concerning areas of interest.

Those areas eliciting the most interest and which will become topics for workshops, include measurement of human effectiveness, guidelines for non-traditional study, sources of funds for teaching improvement and research and proposal writing.

Thursday afternoon will be given to group discussion of the morning's events. Dialogue on an interdisciplinary basis will precede a regrouping along departmental lines. Reports, including recommendations, will be issued from the latter to the administration. Response to faculty recommendations is expected sometime during the next month. Workshop sessions will be offered Friday. Faculty will have the opportunity to choose three of 12 workshops offered at 10:15 A.M. and 1:15 and 2:15 P.M.
